

The adherents of New Thought—a belief system popular in the late 19th and early 20th centuries that encouraged a proto-New Age brand of self-discovery—vehemently believed in the concept of mind over matter. This 1909 work, something of a lost classic of New Thought, adjures readers to find the source of health, happiness, and material well-being deep within them. Author WILLIAM ELMER TOWNE (b. 1874), husband of the influential New Thought editor and writer Elizabeth Towne, explains how the creative and potent thought-force within us all can bring us: . the awakening of the soul . harmony in the home . supreme truth . practical self-healing . longer life . and much more. A fascinating artifact of pop philosophy a century ago, this remains an intriguing read today.
